

Year 8 pupils expertly guided Henlow pupils and visiting schools around the exhibition. Two community sessions were also held during the second week.

Pupils were asked to respond in a variety of ways, through comments, poems and creating some work about Malala Yousafzai.

For me the exhibition was a poignant reminder of the example provided by Anne Frank. The pupils at Henlow Academy showed a sensitive appreciation of how challenging Anne's life had been during the period of confinement. They asked searching questions about her life and the lives of other leaders depicted through the exhibition. I am sure it has also given them ideas for themselves about the responsibilities of citizenship and the respect which we need to show for other people's views. If necessary we must all 'Take a stand' to protect other people's freedom.

"As a member of SACRE I was really pleased we have supported the exhibition and with a number of local schools attending I am sure the benefits will go beyond the host school. I think this experience will have been memorable for all those who attended.

Paul Harpin
SACRE Consultant

Instead of placing our focus on negative stereotypes, we should start changing young people's actions, then eventually you will start to change the stereotypes.

runs travelling exhibitions and educational projects across the UK and educates over 30,000 young people a year. The trust works in schools in seven regions, including the East England where it works in Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Essex, Hertfordshire, Norfolk and Suffolk.

For further information please contact:

Val Ross, Regional Manager,
Anne Frank East
Tel: 07905 167014
Email: valr@annefrank.org.uk
Website: www.annefrank.org.uk
Head Office: 020 7284 5858

Some people are so poor that all they have is money.